Wildflower season is here! These will be the best spots to see them across Southern California in 2019

The season begins in March and runs at least through May, and even longer at high elevations. Many are hoping this will be another "superbloom" year.

Riverside County parks

Location: Various

What to know: Among county-run parks in Riverside County, Harford Springs Reserve outside Perris was getting the earliest start on wildflowers; it also has the benefit of being one of the less-traveled parks. This should also be a really good year for flowers at the Santa Rosa Plateau Wildlife Reserve outside Murrieta, spokeswoman Kyla Brown said, although as of late February, some areas were inaccessible due to winter rain damage (repairs were underway). Other county parks that could have good wildflower blooms are Box Springs Mountain Reserve between Moreno Valley and Riverside and Hidden Valley Wildlife Area in Riverside.
